Copyright and its Controversies

Tuesday, 27 January 2009

10:00am-1:30pm (lunch after)

Elsevier

1600 John F. Kennedy Boulevard (near Market)

18th Floor

William Penn Boardroom

Program

- Copyright & licensing refresher
- Copyright controversies
- Public policy interventions by STM

Speaker

- Mark Seeley, General Counsel, Elsevier & chair, STM Copyright Committee

Background

Copyright issues have always been fundamental to the scholarly publishing industry, but the heat and controversy concerning copyright seems to have taken a huge leap over the past year. Some of this has to do with funding agencies such as the NIH and the Wellcome Trust, but some also has to do with the recently settled Google litigation. Universities are taking positions on copyright and open posting in institutional repositories that also raise concerns.

STM members and their staff throughout their organizations need to understand both the basics and the controversies, and STM wants to ensure that these needs are addressed very directly through this one-day seminar (and the larger series of such seminars).

Fees/Registration

There is no fee charged but registration is limited. Please contact m.seeley@elsevier.com to register for the Philadelphia seminar.

Other venues:

STM is holding seminars in European locations and elsewhere in the eastern United States (see list below). Contact Mark Seeley (m.seeley@elsevier.com) for further information on these other seminars (which are intended to cover the same subjects).
